One Man Preferred Her Sister, the Other Had Work to Do.

The vicissitudes of matrimony are New Yorker, many and many are the ways by which the ch. ren of this world enter into that in Pennsylvania who was worthy of a estate of greatest bliss and keenest ban, says the Boston Courier.

A lady who dwells in the country has this tale to tell concerning the way in which one of her domestics entered the kingdom of the wed, and it is worth record as one of the varieties which is at least amusing:

The girl had secured a swain who had promised to marry her, although it was recognized by her friends that her hold was not as secure upon the man as might have been desired, and the day was fixed for the marrage. The girl made her preparations, but, being of a canny turn

His skill in throwing stones was said to be marvellous. He was mentally deficient, but a giant physically. His aim with stones at any mark or object was as unerring as that of the most skillful handler of the rife.

He could kill a beging a cores of small game, pheasants, rabbits, qualts and squirrels, which he killed with stones.

He could kill a treat. He had a large leather pouch attached to one side of his coat, in which he on all occasions carried a good supply of carefully selected stones.

An exhibition of his skill which was preparations, but, being of a canny turn of mind, she did not leave her place in service, feeling that it was well to be sure before she gave up a certainty.

The deserted maiden took the matter philosophically and remarked that "You never could depend on men critters, anyhow," thereupon going her way and keeping an eye open for the main—and male—chance.

It was but a matter of two or three weeks before she informed her mistress once more that she was going to be married. This time she had secured a farmer and the time of the wedding was near at land, as it had been before.

"You see." the prospective bride explained, "that we are call latin' to get married next Wednesday, if it ain't too pleasant."

"Is accordance with the principle of pleasant."

"Oh, that's all right." the girl re. sponded, with an easy air. "You see if it it's a good hay day, he'll have to stay at home an' tend to the hav: but if it ain't he's coming inter town an' we'll get hitched."

"But if it is pleasant and he does not come," the mistress inquired, "what

The girl took it very caimly and came to sak if she might have a loat of wedding-cake made in the kitchen, as there seemed to be plenty of time. The mistress gave her consent and the cook good-naturedly set to work and manufactured the confection.

Thursday also are a few and the cook good naturedly set to work and manufactured the confection.

Thursday also was fair, but Friday was rainy. All day the girl waited for her lover, but the unreliable swain did not come. Saturday the experience was re-peated, and on Saturday night the de-serted damsel declared she had no more

So the domestics, nothing loath, set to work, and with much jesting devoured the loaf of cake, with what result to their digestion has not been recorded.

And lo! on Sunday afternoon the longlost lover arrived. He casually stated that he had found a lot of things around the barn that needed to be attended to on the two rainy days, and that he had concluded on the whole that the bride would have cost him his chances were it not that in the rural districts husbands are not as plentiful as blackberries.

The bride came in to say good by to her mistress and explained her views of the stuation with charming frankness.

Now he's here, "she said. "I think I'd better make sure of him an' marry him right off. He's a good, likely man, an' he's got a good farm, an' he ain't so overanxious to get married no how thats likely he'll ever come back if I don't go with him now."

overanxious to get married no likely he'll ever come back if I don't go There was no time for more wedding-cake and that was dispensed with. The pair went off to a clergyman and were married out of hand. What will be their future course no man knoweth, but the former mistress has now a story where with to enliven her calls upon friends, and there is a vacancy in her staff of ser-vants which in the country is a matter of

CRANKS IN BARBER CHAIRS.

Instances Which Prove that the Barber Must of Necessity Be Sharp. Truly the barber is and must be agenius in his way. Unless he has a particularly snowed little rallying power.

The sales up to noon were 240,000 shares, of which 10,000 were in St. Paul, 17,700 Rock Island, Chiengo Gas 10,700, Eric 10,500 and Hichmond Terminal 10,400.

Quincy and by the talk about a war with thill.

After sifting matters to the bottom it became plan that leading operators reached the conclusion that a sharp reaction was needed to weed out a host of speculators who have gone beyond their means, and that with this ead it, when nothing has been left undone to create a feeling of uncastness.

Distilling & Cartle Feeding dropped to 5734, Jan. 7 the shares sold at 6745. The break to-day was due to advices from floston that in February the company's officials will be indicted for violating the Auti-Trust law. It was also said that the company will be indicted in every state in which it does business. dicted in every State in which it does business.

Another despatch had it that Shufeldt will bring suit against the Company for $500,000 for services in Securing the control of the Shufeldt-Lynch Distillery Company. Chicago operators who began selling the stock early in December are understood to be still short.

Lazard Frees received $100,000 gold by the steemship La Gascope, which arrived yesterday.

It was reported that the Missouri Pacific directors at their meeting te-day took action in regard to withdrawing from the Western Traine Association. Mr. Gould subsequently denied this.

First, there is the crank who stub-bornly maintains that only one barber lives who can trim his hair properly, and would rather sit three-quarters of an hour waiting for his ideal artist's leasure than to allow another barber to touch his looks.

Then there is the crank with a threestory forehead who persists in having his hair cut a la Pempadeur, or the forehead-less individual who is urruly convinced that a bang is the thing he must wear to

It would indeed be madness for the speaking, with white diamonds.
